Clay's Corner

Deuteronomy 6:4-9, words to live by: "Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God, the Lord is one. You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your might. And these words that I command you today shall be on your heart. You shall teach them diligently to your children, and shall talk of them when you sit in your house, and when you walk by the way, and when you lie down, and when you rise. You shall bind them as a sign on your hand, and they shall be as frontlets between your eyes. You shall write them on the doorposts of your house and on your gates."

Perhaps the single greatest command, the most important ever given, were these words spoken by Moses prior to Israel claiming the land God had promised Abraham he would give to his descendants. These words summed up all the Law and the Prophets according to Jesus, thousands of years after they were first spoken. And their importance holds as true today as they did back then; "Love God with all of your heart, soul, and mind."

But there is something else in this passage, something very important, something oft over looked. Moses didn't just give the greatest command. He commanded that the people of Israel put them at the forefront of all that they did, every day. He said, talk about them. Anytime, anywhere, in your conversations together and with others, put God in the conversation. And to make sure you never forget, write them down and display them in places where you will always be reminded, your door posts, your gate posts, etc. He commanded them to make and wear bracelets with these words written in ink upon them and also to wear them as a ceremonial band around the head.

I get the idea that Moses feared Israel, given their propensity to forget things, would soon forget God. This sounds eerily familiar.

Thus I wonder, would we be well advised to do the same? Not because doing so would ensure our salvation? But because doing so would help remind us every day both who and whose we are. In a world fraught with distractions, would we not be well advised to talk more about God, more about Christ, more about the Church and all things spiritual than the things we talk about daily? I think so.

My challenge to you all: start this day, and spend more time talking about God. Interject Him into your conversations. Make a sign, make several signs, write upon them this passage from Deuteronomy and hang them on your gate posts, on your door posts, in your dining room, anywhere in and around your house that people tend to congregate. And talk about God.

As a side note, I know far too many people who claim to be Christians who can tell you more about sports stats than they can about God. I know far too many "Christians" who can tell you more about their job than they can tell you about Christ and the role of His Church. Are you one of them? Let's make 2016 more about the year of our Lord than about things that don't matter. Let's change the dialog and start talking about God.
