

Clay's Corner

When I look at all the expense surrounding us every time I walk into any building where God's people meet to worship; whenever I think about the education level of the men and women of today who have involved themselves in the ministry of the Gospel, I wonder.

I wonder what the people of 50 or 75 years ago would have thought as they look at the fact that we have better educated ministers, far more elaborate and expensive buildings and spend far more money on activities and programs than any of our ancestors could have ever dreamed possible. I wonder what their expectations would be for themselves and their ministries had they had at their disposal the things we have today.

Change gears with me for a moment. Football is over for another season. (Can I get an amen??? LOL!) Basketball season is well underway and with the approach of spring, I have seen many a young man out on the diamonds practicing, getting ready for the first baseball game. And with baseball in mind, I got to thinking back to the famous quote from the Kevin Costner movie, Field of Dreams, "If you build it, they will come."

Fifty years or so ago, most of the things we surround ourselves with and take for granted did not exist. Most didn't even exist on a drawing board much less on the shelves of a store. But the dreams were there—of better communications, better educations, better understanding so that the cause of Christ could be shared with more and more people. I can remember many times in my life hearing someone say, "Can you imagine what we could do, who we could reach, the things we could accomplish for Christ if only..."

And they were adding daily to the rolls, back then, the number of people rescued from the gates of hell.

And I wonder, if they had available to them all the things and money we have today, would they still be as successful in their tasks as they were without all those things...

... or would they be like us?

I said all that to say this, evangelism still requires personal involvement. You can have the prettiest buildings, the best programs, the smartest and most eloquently speaking ministers and still not reach the lost.

You have to get involved in the lives of others if you are going to make a difference in other's lives. PERIOD.
